

Sinclair Broadcasting has chosen to force
their stations to
air an anti-Kerry
documentary, in an
obviously biased
attempt to swing the election in favor of George Bush.

Whatever happened to fair and even treatment of candidates by radio and television? I thought this was required by law -
guess not. Sinclair
should not be allowed to use the public airwaves to force their political views on Americans. I assume that they feel that a continued Bush White House will continue to support
increasing monopolies of the media. If they are allowed to force the stations they own to air a Republican
commercial, which is clearly what the anti-Kerry
documentary is, they should also be forced to make their stations show either
an anti-Bush or
pro-Kerry program,
of equal time.

I am becoming quite sick of the bias in the media, and this takes the cake.
Laws against media
monopolies should be strengthened, not
weakened by rules
and regulations
behind the backs of Congress.

Thank you for allowing me to express my opinion.
In this country, I sometimes think that there is an increasing viewpoint

that I should not be allowed to do so unless it agrees
with those currently in power.
